LARGEST CROWD IS DAY'S RECORD

Conservative Estimates Place Number of People Here For Horse Show Today at 5,000.

AUTO PAGEANT ON TONIGHT

Judge Declares he Never Tied Ribbons on Such an Outlay of Horse Flesh.

Conservative estimates placed on the crowd here today for the horse show ranged from four to five thousand. It is estimated that it is the largest crowd that Rushville has had on her streets for many years. Especially could the crowd be seen to advantage when people gathered on the west court house lawn for the free attraction this afternoon.

It was expected that the horse show would close late this afternoon with a parade of all the premium winners. This is always the grand climax of the show and this year it was thought it would be larger and better than ever before on account of the greater number of higher class of horses shown.

The automobile parade will be the principal attraction on tonight's program. This afternoon it was anticipated that over one hundred Rush county automobiles would be in line. They will all be beautifully decorated and compete for the four prizes, amounting in all to forty-five dollars. The parade will form in North Perkins street, near Seventh, and will move down Main as near eight o'clock as possible. The parade will go around the public square west in Second and double back to Main and north on Main to Fifth, where the pageant will be stopped. The first four machines will carry the band and will run abreast while the remainder will follow in single file thirty feet apart.

The best class of the horse show was exhibited in First street this afternoon—the light harness class. It was there that the competition was keenest on account of the thoroughbreds which were entered and the large number of horses entered in each event.

William Davis, the judge of this class, who has acted in the same capacity in many places in the central States, confessed to several people this afternoon that it was the finest outlay of light harness horses which he had ever tied ribbons on. He declared that he never hoped to visit another horse show or county fair where such an exhibition of well bred and fine looking horses were competing for prizes.

A lot of interest was evinced in the ladies driving contest as usual this afternoon. There were a number of horses all of which looked good for first money. The gents' contest was also closely contested.

Interest in the showing of the general purpose class of horses this morning was very great. All of the shows were made in First street so that the horses could be driven fast over the dirt streets, and a large crowd of several hundred people gathered along the sidewalk to watch the show.

The number of entries in the general purpose class was larger this year than ever before and the class of entries was very high. There were more valuable horses in each one of the events in the class, horsemen say, than have ever been collected here.

In one of the events where general purpose mares were entered, there was an exceptionally large number of horses entered. It required some time for the judge, William Davis of West Elkins, Ohio, to tie the ribbons. He had each horse driven up and

MILROY MAN IS KILLED

Lon Maffett is Hit by Train at Benton Harbor, Mich.

The funeral services of Lon Maffett, who was killed by a train at Benton Harbor, Michigan, a few days ago, were held at Milroy yesterday. The services were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Foster from the Milroy Christian church. The deceased was a brother of J. H. Maffett of Milroy and formerly lived in that place. He was employed in the railroad yards at Benton Harbor when he was hit by the train and killed almost instantly.

HURT IN MAKING HIS FIRST TRIP

Nate Wheeler Had Operated New Castle "Dinky" on His Initial Run When Crash Came.

FORMER LOCAL MAN BAD LUCK

It was Nate Wheeler's first trip as conductor of the city car in New Castle yesterday when he was seriously injured in a collision between his car and an interurban car on the T. H. I. & E. line. Wheeler was a motorman on the I. & C. for a number of years and moved from this city to Greenfield several months ago. He was working extra on the New Castle line. Wheeler was hurried to his home in Greenfield in a special car dispatched from that city for that purpose.

Wheeler was in his vestibule when the heavy interurban car struck the "dinky" city car and ploughed half through it. It is considered miraculous that Wheeler was not killed. He was covered up with debris and did not regain consciousness until he had arrived at a physician's office. He suffered a deep wound in his head, an injury to his left shoulder and hip and his back. The crash was due to the dense fog which hung over the city. The interurban motorman thought the city car had had ample time to take the siding and did not see it was on the main track until the crash was inevitable.

RESTAURANT BLAZE DID SMALL DAMAGE

Grease From Broiler Caught Fire, Causing Bad Scare at the Madden Cafe.

DEPARTMENT WAS CALLED

A life sized scare was handed the patrons of Madden's restaurant today shortly after noon, when the grease from a broiler caught fire and the flames leaped to the ceiling. The restaurant was crowded at the time and orders and dinners were forgotten in the scramble for the door.

The fire department was called from box 32 at the corner of First and Morgan streets. For a time the fire looked dangerous and it was thought that the firemen would have to throw water inside the room, but the flames were smothered without much damage. As a precaution the firemen entered the room above the restaurant and saturated the floor with water. A hole was also cut in the room to get rid of some of the smoke. Only a small amount of damage was done and this principally from the smoke.

COMPLAIN ABOUT REPAIR OF ROAD

Farmers South of City Raise Kick About Manner Used in Working Over Pike.

SAY NO JUDGMENT IS USED
Declare it is Waste of Money to Use Methods Now in Vogue—Road Drag.

Farmers living on or near the New Salem pike are emitting somewhat of a kick on account of the manner in which a section of the pike just south of the city is being repaired. Not only farmers in that section of the county, but also residents of this city who are compelled to drive over it much are very much dissatisfied with the work.

The annual fall work of repairing the road has just been started. Residents of that district say that the road supervisor is proceeding in just exactly the opposite manner in which he should in order to get the best results out of the money spent and the material used. They assert that it is a waste of money to repair the road as it is being done now and that the highway would be much better without repair than to do it under the present method.

Pi. King is supervisor of the strip of road which is being repaired now and about which farmers are complaining. They say that the crushed stone is being hauled to the middle of the road and dumped there in a pile after the dirt has been scraped from the center to little ridges along each side. Farmers and men of this city who are interested in the county's roads say that this plan only results in the road being in a worse condition than it was before the repair was made. After some travel has been made over the piles of stone dumped in the center of the road, the road bed is leveled down to a succession of bumps and hollows which makes travel very difficult when it could be made as good as a pavement, according to farmers and others.

This stretch of road has been bad for several years due to the methods which have been used in repairing it each year, so it is said by farmers who travel over it many times each week. It is pointed out that a farmer living south of the city recently had to stop his team every few feet while hauling a load of corn to this city because the bumps in the road made the wagon sway so much that it was feared it would topple over.

Farmers who have studied road building considerably say that another plan could be followed in the building of the road which would be as cheap as any and as easy and which would bring about the same results. They declare that the stone should be leveled out after it has been dumped out in the middle of the road and the crushed stone and the gravel which is scraped off the road should be shoved back up on top of the stone and leveled off. It should be graded, they assert, so that the water would drain off. Under this plan it is argued that the loose material thrown on top of the stone would sift down between the crushed rocks and would serve to cement the stone together when rain fell on the road and it was traveled over some.

There has been considerable dissatisfaction among the farmers of Rush county for some time in regard to the manner in which the roads of the county are repaired. Many of the farmers point out the fact that many road supervisors not only pile crushed stone but gravel as well in the center of the road and allow it to upset. He was thrown out but suffered no injuries.

MAYOR SHANK IN TUG OF WAR

Enters Three Horses in Show But Does Not Get Rich Off Prize Money.

HELPS "MAC" EAT POTATOES
Indianapolis Official Enjoys the Day
Here and Consents to Act as Auctioneer at Sale.

Mayor Lew Shank of Indianapolis arrived in this city this morning for the horse show. Mr. Shank brought three horses down with him for show purposes and although he did not get rich in the way of prize money, his three animals were beauties and showed that he was a lover of fine horses. Mr. Shank entered a stallion in the general purpose class, and in the light harness events, had two entered under the best mare or gelding class with lady driver and gent driver.

While here the mayor of Indianapolis is the guest of Chief of Police McAllister. He plans to help McAllister get rid of the potatoes he received yesterday. It was planned to have the mayor act as judge in awarding the prizes in the window decorating contest, but he declined for fear a supply of eggs would be coming his way. "They can throw potatoes at me, but I can't stand eggs," said Mayor Shank. An expert window decorator from Indianapolis will act in the place of Mr. Shank as judge in the window contest.

The mayor of Indianapolis got in on everything pulled off here today and was kept on the go all the time. Because of his size and strength he was invited to take part in the tug of war which was held on the court house square at 4 o'clock this afternoon between the Anderson township team and one made up of Rush county men. In the tug of war he was the "dark horse" and was registered under the name of "W. H. Bronson." It was thought best to do this because the promoters were afraid the Anderson township team might "turkey" if they knew they were up against a "ringer."

The mayor is said to have a powerful grip, not only on Indianapolis, but on a rope when it comes to such strenuous work as a tug of war.

He has consented to remain in the city for the sale tomorrow and will act as auctioneer. Mr. Shank is an experienced auctioneer and is expected to add much toward the success of the sale.

RETURNS RUNAWAY GIRL

Chief of Police Finds Greensburg Miss and Sends Her Home.

Chief of Police McAllister went to the home of Jennie LaTerre here this morning and found Josephine Hugle, a young miss of Greensburg, whose parents sent word here late yesterday afternoon that she had run away from home to come to the home of her cousin here. The chief found her there this morning and put her on a train and started her back home.

The police received no information concerning the reason for her leaving home.

AUTO UPSETS.

Gurney Hinchman was driving his automobile to his farm yesterday and attempted to pass a buggy in the road when the wheels of his machine struck a rut and caused it to upset. He was thrown out but suffered no injuries.

EIGHT EXTRA POLICEMEN

Horse Show Association Pays For Additional Men.

Eight extra policemen were added to the force this morning by Chief McAllister on the recommendation of the horse show association. The association realized that two men could not handle the crowds and offered to pay for the services of the extra men. The crowd of yesterday and last night could not be handled by two men although Chief McAllister and Policeman Wolters did it as best they could. With the extra men little trouble is expected.

MILLARD SANDERS IS HERE FOR SHOW

World Famous Driver of Fast Horses Visits Rushville Today to Attend Horse Exhibit.

DROVE LOU DILLON IN 1:56

Millard Sanders of Indianapolis, the famous race horse driver, who has gained renown all over the United States as a trainer and race driver of exceptional merit was an interested spectator at the horse show this afternoon. Mr. Sanders stood by and watched the light harness events as they were reeled off and made no comment on some of the fancy horse flesh. He refused to state whether he was on a scouting trip looking for some likely candidates for the mile tracks.

Mr. Sanders has driven many famous race horses in his day. He rode behind Lou Dillon when she ... made her world's record of 1:56 1/2. He is manager of Sterling R. Holt's Maywood stock farm just out of Indianapolis.

MAY OPEN SERUM PRODUCING PLANT
Demand Exceeds Supply Owing to Great Amount of Hog Cholera and Dr. Kigin is Investigating.

IS PRACTICAL REMEDY

Dr. L. C. Kigin of the firm of Davis & Kigin, veterinarians, has gone to Lafayette to spend a couple of days at Purdue University the guest of Dr. R. S. Craig. Dr. Kigin will investigate the production of cholera serum with a view of opening up a serum producing plant here. The demand has been so great for serum in this vicinity and the production so limited at Purdue that the demand has greatly exceeded the supply. This is owing to the great amount of hog cholera and the small appropriation given to Purdue by the last session of the legislature.

This condition not only exists in Indiana for Drs. Davis and Kigin have tried to get serum from the various experiment stations in the corn and hog belt states and have received the same reply from each. Namely that they could not supply their state demand. It is to be hoped that the local firm will engage in this worthy cause.

SHERIFF PUTS IN A BUSY DAY

Henry County Sheriff Serves a Batch of Grand Jury Warrants in Knightstown.

FOR LIQUOR LAW VIOLATIONS

Cyrus Barrett is Arrested For Failing to Bury Dead Hogs on Local Indictment.

Fortunately there were ample funds in Knightstown or Sheriff Kirk on his visit there would have depopulated the town. The presence of money prevented a half dozen of the Knightstown citizens from being taken to the Henry county jail after they had been arrested on warrants charging them with violations of the law. The warrants were based on grand jury indictments. All of the persons arrested were able to give bond.

Charles Clark, former marshal of Knightstown, and formerly of New Castle, now manager of a pool room in Knightstown, was arrested on the charge of permitting minors to play pool and loiter in his establishment. There are three such charges against him.

James Braden, proprietor of another Knightstown pool room, was also arrested on three charges of a similar nature to those against Clark.

George Green was put under arrest on two charges for permitting minors to loiter or play pool in his establishment.

William Reecer was arrested on one such charge and Charles Miller had three warrants of the same nature served on him.

The sheriff also arrested Vern Wink, a Knightstown druggist, on the charge of violating the liquor laws. There are three indictments against him.

Sheriff Kirk also arrested Cyrus Barrett on the charge of failing to buy dead hogs. The warrant came from this county and was issued from a grand jury indictment. Barrett gave bond for his appearance in the Rush circuit court.

Charles Clark, one of the men arrested by Sheriff Kirk, appeared in the Henry circuit court yesterday morning. He pleaded guilty to the charge of permitting minors to loiter in his pool room and was fined $25 and costs by Judge Jackson. The amount assessed was paid. The other two cases against him were nolled.

RAIN STOPS GAME AGAIN

Rain prevented the playing of the world series game between New York and Philadelphia at the latter city again today as it did yesterday. Local fans predict that the delay is highly beneficial to the Giants who did not appear to have much of a chance when they lost the third game of the series. They have lost two out of three.

Quebec is a city without pawnbrokers, the last person in that business having died about thirty years ago. Since that time, it is said, no person has applied for a license.

Guard the Family Health

Health is often endangered by unsanitary cooking utensils. Physicians have found that cancer is caused by enamel ware chipping off and irritating the stomach.

If you have children or invalids in the family beware of cheap cooking utensils that crack, scale, peel off, tarnish and rust. Disease germs lurk in the worn places and there is further danger of tainting the food. Health is too precious to take risks with it. Be safe. Use which are guaranteed for 15 years constant service and will never spoil food nor endanger health.

1872-1912.

The campaign of 1912 promises to have some of the features of the campaign of 1872, says the Huntington Herald. It was "anything to beat Grant" in 1872, just as it promises to be "anything to beat Taft" next year. And it is to be remembered that Grant won by one of the greatest majorities ever returned at the polls or by an electoral college. The anti-Grant sentiment at the beginning of the campaign was general throughout the country among Republicans. It was led by some of the greatest and most famous Republicans—Greely, Shurz, Chase, Sumner, et al.—and Greeley was nominated for president at a great convention called by "Liberal Republicans" at Cincinnati. Later his nomination was endorsed by the Democratic National convention. Overwhelming defeat at the polls broke Greeley's heart, and he died in a few months.

Conditions are very much the same now as then. General Grant was not a puppet to do the bidding of ambitious leaders. They sought to destroy him because they could not bend him to their wishes. The same malignant purpose is seen in the opposition to Taft. It will fail as ignominiously as did the crusade against Grant. The campaign of 1872 made a new alignment in politics. Many Republicans—some of them in Huntington—deserted to the Democracy, but their places were more than filled by recruits from the Democratic party whose sense of fairness and justice was outraged by the conspiracy of ambitious leaders to control the policies of the Nation for their own aggrandisement. President Taft's offending is that of granting a square deal to all classes of citizens. And when the smoke of the battle has cleared away in 1912, it will be found that the people have taken the full measure of his worth and that he has triumphed, just as General Grant did, on his own merits and the achievements of his administration in the interest of the people.

The Outlook wishes an explanation from President Taft of the joker in the Canadian reciprocity bill whereby print paper goes on the free list regardless of the action of Canada on the treaty. President Taft was not responsible for this joker in the law. It was put in by a lobby representing great newspapers which have been animated solely in their course on the tariff question for several years by the desire for free paper. Senator Root attempted to force this joker out of the bill, but was unsuccessful. It will be remembered that the metropolitan newspapers, including the great organs of reform, suppressed the news about this feature of the treaty. Since print paper was put on the free list, however, the price has gone up, and the joke is on the newspapers.

Indianapolis reports are that the Tom Marshall contingent in Indianapolis—Mr. Marshall and the state officials—are suspicious that Tom Taggart isn't wholly devoted to the governor's boom for president. The governor will find that not only Taggart but the rank and file of the Democratic party will bear watching.

Sue wore a dress of coral pink, tightly fitting, high to her little chin, and seemed herself like a coral strand from neck to toe, clad in the color she affected, and which had become celebrated as the Letty Lane pink. Her feathered hat hid her face, and she was completely shielded as she bent down drawing pictures with her bare finger on the cloth. After a little while she said to Poniotowsky without glancing at him:

"If you stare any longer like that, Frederigo, you'll break your eye-glass. You know how I hate it."

Used as he was to her sharpness, he nevertheless flushed and sat back and looked across the room, where, to their right, protected from them as they were from him by the great door, a young man sat alone. Whether or not he had come to Maxim's intending to join a congenial party, should he find one, or to choose for a companion some one of the women who, at the entrance of the tall blond boy, stirred and invited him with their raised eyebrows and their smiles, will not be known. Dan Blair was alone, pale as the pictures Letty Lane had drawn on the cloth, and he, too, feasted his eyes on the Gaity girl.

"By Jove!" said the Hungarian under his breath, and she eagerly asked: "What? Whom? Whom do you see?"

Turning his back sharply he evaded her question and she did not pursue the idea, and as a physical weakness overwhelmed her when Poniotowsky after a second said: "Come, cherie, for heaven's sake, let's go"—she mechanically rose and passed out.

Several young men taping together came over eagerly to speak to her and claim acquaintance with the Gaity girl, and walked along out to the motor. There Letty Lane discovered she had dropped her handkerchief, and sent the prince back for it.

As though he had been waiting for the reappearance of Poniotowsky, Dan Blair stood close to the little table which Letty Lane had left, her handkerchief in his hand. As Poniotowsky came up Dan thrust the small trifle of sheer linen into his waistcoat pocket.

"I will trouble you for Miss Lane's handkerchief," said Poniotowsky, his eyes cold.

"You may," said Dan as quietly, his blue eyes like sparks from a star, "trouble me for hell!" And lifting from the table Poniotowsky's own half-emptied glass of champagne, the boy flung the contents full in the Hungarian's face.

The wine dashed against Poniotowsky's lips and in his eyes. Blair laughed out loud, his hands in his pockets. The insult was low and noiseless; the little glass shattered as it fell so softly that with the music its gentle crash was unheard.

Poniotowsky wiped his face tranquilly and bowed.

"You shall hear from me after I have taken Miss Lane home."

"Tell her," said the boy, "where you left the handkerchief, that's all."

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Such Stuff as Dreams.

Dan was in his room at the hotel. He woke and then slept again. Nothing seemed strange to him—nothing seemed real. It was three o'clock in the morning, the rumble of Paris was dull; it did not disturb him, for he seemed without the body and to have grown giantlike, and to fill the room. He had a sense of suffocation and the need to break through the windows and to escape into ether.

The entrance of Poniotowsky's two friends was a part with the unreal naturalness. One was a Roumanian, the other a Frenchman—both spoke fluent English. Dan, his eyes fixed on the foreign faces, only half saw them; they blurred, their voices were small and far away. Finally he said:

"All right, all right, I can shoot well enough; this kind of thing isn't our custom, you know—I'd as soon kill him one way as another, as a matter of fact. No, I don't know a darned soul here." There was a confab incomprehensible to Dan. "It's all one to me, gentlemen," he said. "I'd rather not drag in my friends. Fix it up to suit yourselves."

He wanted them to go—to be alone to stretch his arms, to rid himself of the burden of sense and be free. And after they had left, he remained in his window till dawn. It came soon, midsummer dawn, a singularly tender morning in his heart. His mind worked with great rapidity. He had made his will in the States. He wished he could have left everything to Letty Lane, but if, as Ruggles said, he was a pauper? Perhaps it wasn't a lie after all. Dan had written and telegraphed Ruggles asking for the solemn truth, and also telling him where he was and asking the older man to come over. If Ruggles proved he was poor, why, some of his burden was gone. His money had been a burden, he knew it now. He might have no use for money the next day. What good could it do him in a fix like this? He was to meet Poniotowsky at five o'clock in a place whose name he couldn't recall. He had seen it advertised, though; people went there for lunch.

They were to shoot at twenty-five paces—he might be a Rockefeller or a beggar for all the good his money could do him in a pinch like this.

His father wouldn't approve, the old man wouldn't approve, but he had sent him here to learn the ways of the old world. A flickering smile crossed his beautiful, set face. His lessons hadn't done him much good; he would like to have seen good old Gordon Galorey again; he loved him—he had no use for Ruggles, no use—it had been all his fault. His mind reached out to his father, and the old man's words came dinnin' back: "Buy the things that stay above ground, my boy." What were those things? He had thought they were passion—he had thought they were love, and he had put all on one woman. She couldn't stand by him, now that he was poor.

The spasm in his heart was so sharp that he made a low sound in his throat and leaned against the casing of the window. He must see her, touch her once more.

The fellows Poniotowsky's seconds had chosen to be Dan's representatives came in to "fix him up." They were in frock coats and carried their silk hats and their gloves. He could have laughed at them. Then they made him think of undertakers, and his blood grew cold. He handled the revolvers with care and interest.

"I'm not going to let him murder me, you know," he told his seconds.

They helped him to dress, at least one of them did, while the other took Dan's place by the window and looked to the boy like a figure of death.

The hour was getting on; he heard his own motor drive up, and they went down, through the deserted hotel.

The men who had consented to act for Dan regarded their principal curiously. He wasn't pale, there was a brightness on his face.

"Partons," said one of them, and told Blair's chauffeur where to go and how to run. "Partons."

Even the ground they flew over, the trees with their chestnut plumes, blurred, were indistinct, nebulous, as if seen through a diving-bell under the sea. Fear—he didn't know the word. He wasn't afraid—it wasn't that; yet he had a certainty that it was all up with him. He was young—very young—and he hadn't done much with the job. His father would have been ashamed of him. Twenty-five paces. They were measured off by the four seconds, and at their signal Dan Blair and the prince took their positions, the revolvers raised perpendicularly in their right hands.

They had held those bright, little feet in his hands on the Thames day; they had just filled his great hands.

Then Letty Lane, too, spirited away, and the boy's thoughts turned to the man he was to meet. "The affairs are purely formal," he had heard some one say, "an exchange of balls, without serious results."

One of his companions offered Blair a cigar. He refused, the idea sickened him. Here the gentlemen exchanged glances, and one murmured: "Is he afraid?"

The other shrugged.

"Not astonishing—he's a child."

At this Dan glanced up and smiled—what Lily, Duchess of Breakwater, had called his divine young smile. The two secretly were ashamed—he was charming.

As they got out of the motor Dan said:

"I want to ask a question of Prince Poniotowsky—if it is allowed. I'll write it on my card."

After a conference between Prince Poniotowsky's seconds and Dan's, the slip was handed the prince.

"If you get out all right, will you marry Miss Lane? I shall be glad to know."

Sodawater Fountain Girl.

His next sensation was that a warm stream flowed about his heart.

"My life's blood," he could dimly think, "my heart's blood."

Redder than coral, more precious, more costly than any gift his millions could have bought her. "I've spent it for the girl I love." The stream pervaded him, caressed him, folded his limbs about, became an enchanted sea on which he floated, and its color changed from crimson to coral pale, and then to white, and became a cold, cold polar sea—and he lay on it like a frozen man, whose exploration had been in vain, and above him Greenland's icy mountains rose like emerald, on every side.

That is it—"Greenland's icy mountains."

How she sang it—down-down. Her voice fell on him like magic balm. He was a little boy in church, sitting small and shy in the pew. The tune was deep and low and heavenly sweet. What a pretty mouth the soda-fountain girl had—like coral; and her eyes like gray seas. The flies buzzed, they droned so loudly that he couldn't hear her. Ah, that was terrible—he couldn't hear her.

No—no, it wouldn't do. He must hear the hymn out before he died. Buzz—buzz—drone—drone. Way down he almost heard the soft note. It was ecstasy. Sky—high up—too faint. Ah, Sodawater Fountain Girl—sing—sing—with all your heart so that it may reach his ears and charm him to those strands toward which he floats.

The expression of anguish on the young fellow's face was so heartbreaking that the doctor, his ear at Dan's lips, tried to learn what thing his poor, fading mind longed for.

From the bed's foot, where he stood, Dan's chauffeur came to the gentleman's side, and nodded:

"Right, sir, right, sir—I'll fetch Miss Lane—I'll have her here, sir—keep up, Mr. Blair."

He was going barefoot, a boy still following the plow through the mountain fields. Miles and miles stretched away before him of dark, loamy land. He saw the plow tear up the waving furrows, tossing the earth in sprinkling lines. He heard the shrill note of the phoebe bird, and looking heavenward saw it darting into the pale sky.

"What a dandy shot!" he thought, "What a bully shot!"

Prince Poniotowsky had made a good shot. . . .

Ah, there was the smell of the hay-fields—no—violets that sweetly laid their petals on his lips and face. He was back again in church, lying prone before an altar. If she would only sing, he would rise again—that he knew—and her coral shoes would not dance over his grave.

He opened his eyes wide and looked into Letty Lane's. She bent over him, crying.

"Sing," he whispered.

She didn't understand.

"Sodawater Fountain Girl—if you only knew how . . . the flies buzzed, and how the droning was a living pain. . . ."

She said to Ruggles: "He wants something so heartbreakingly—what can we do?" She saw his hands stir rhythmically on the counterpane—he didn't look to her more than ten years old. . . . What a cruel thing—he was a boy just of age—a boy—

Ruggles remembered the nights he had spent before the footlights of the Gaiety, and that the pale woman trembling there weeping was a great singer.

"I guess he wants to hear you sing."

She kneeled down by him; she trembled so she couldn't stand.

The others, the doctor and Ruggles, the waiters and porters gathered in the hall, heard. No one of them understood the Gaiety girl's English words.

"From Greenland's icy mountains,
From India's coral strands . . ."

They were merciful and let him listen in peace. Through the blur in his brain, over the beat of his young ardent heart, above the short breaths the notes reached his failing senses, and lifted him—lifted him. There wasn't a very long distance between his boyhood and his twenty-two years to go, and he was not so weak but that he could travel so far.

He sat there by his father again—and heard. The flies buzzed, and he didn't mind them. The smell of the fields came in through the windows and the Soda Fountain Girl sang—and sang; and as she sang her face grew holy to his eyes—radiant with a beauty he had not dreamed a woman's face could wear. Above the choir rail she stood and sang peerlessly, and the church began to fade and fade, and still she stood there in a shaft of light, and her face was like an angel's, and she held her arms out to him as the waters rose to his hips. She bent and lifted him—lifted him high upon the strands. . . .

Under a group of chestnut trees in bright feathered flower Prince Poniotowsky and his seconds waited, their frock coats buttoned up and their gloves and silk hats in their hands. As Blair and his companions came up the others stood uncovered, grim and formal, according to the code.

Twenty-five paces. They were measured off by the four seconds, and at their signal Dan Blair and the prince took their positions, the revolvers raised perpendicularly in their right hands.

Still more indistinctly the boy saw the sharp-cut picture of it all . . . the diving bell was sinking deeper—deeper—into the sea.

"If I aim," he said to himself, "I shall kill sure—sure."

Blair heard the command: "Fire!" and supposed that after that he fired.

CHAPTER XXX.

Sodawater Fountain Girl.

His next sensation was that a warm stream flowed about his heart.

"My life's blood," he could dimly think, "my heart's blood."

Notre Dame Student Demands $23,000 Damages From Officers and Complainant at South Bend.

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 19.—That fear of the newspapers caused the police to arrest William Basil Hayden, a student in Notre Dame university on a false charge of burglary is alleged in a suit for $23,000 damages, filed here against Joseph S. Chappell, assistant chief of police; William Cassidy, chief of detectives, and James A. Study, a saloon keeper. The suit followed the acquittal of Hayden in the city court on a charge of attempting to enter Study's saloon for the purpose of burglary.

Mr. Hayden graduates next June in mechanical engineering from the University, where he is highly esteemed by both faculty and students.

BURNS FOR MONTHS

Grain in Elevator Ruins Requires Constant Watching.

Columbus, Ind., Oct. 19.—The sodden wheat and corn in the basement of the ruins of the Ben C. Thomas grain elevator here, is still burning.
The fire started the morning of Aug.
3, and has burned ever since. Firemen remained on the scene several days soaking the grain with water and when they left the fire seemed to be out. However, it breaks out again every few days. Watchmen have been employed to keep the fire down, and millions of gallons of water have been thrown on the grain, in addition to the heavy rains of August, September and this month. The ruins are still smoking and the fire in the bottom of the mass of grain seems to be burning as rapidly as it did a day or two after the fire broke out.

ANOTHER DEMONSTRATION

Indiana Farmers Interested in Purdue's Power Plowing Tests.

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 19.—An opportunity is to be given farmers to see the operations of the greatest traction plow in the world tomorrow morning.
This plow is operated by three traction engines and cuts fifty furrows almost sixty feet wide. In a demonstration last Saturday it established a world's record in plowing. An acre of ground was turned in 4 minutes and 15 seconds.

In addition to the big plow, a smaller machine turning five furrows will be demonstrated.

Says She Was Coerced.

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 19.—The trial of the breach of promise suit brought by Elva Close against Orville Fox is in progress here. She asks for $10,000. Both were school teachers.
After Fox married another young woman, Miss Close was taken to a lawyer's office and is said to have accepted a few hundred dollars, but she asserts that she was intimidated into doing so by threats made to her by men representing Fox.

He Wanted to Jump.

Elkhart, Ind., Oct. 19.—Fearing he would yield to an almost irresistible desire to take his own life, J. K. Blood, a Chicago traveling salesmen, appealed to the local police for protection from himself. Blood obtained a room at a local hotel and, influenced by a desire to commit suicide, he raised a window to jump out, but overcame the impulse while poised on the window sill. Then he appealed to the police.

Of Interest to Teachers.

Indianapolis, Oct. 19.—In an opinion to Charles A. Greathouse, state superintendent of public instruction, the attorney general holds that a county superintendent cannot issue a license to anyone to teach in the schools of the state who has not complied with the act of 1907, which requires twelve weeks' preparation in some school designed to prepare for teaching.

Traction Engine Exploded.

Farmersburg, Ind., Oct. 19.—Colonel
A. P. Asbury, past commander of the Indiana G. A. R., was probably fatally injured when a traction engine used in moving a barn exploded. Jacob Hauger and Ace Hall, workmen, were severely injured and a barn owned by Bruce Fox was destroyed by fire which followed the explosion.

Murder Cases Set For Next Week.

Jasper, Ind., Oct. 19.—Daniel Spurgeon, charged with the murder of his son-in-law, Ellsworth Mack, will be tried next Monday. The trial of Mrs.
Ella Mertens for the murder of her husband will follow that of Spurgeon.

olis chemist for analysis, are reported to show $20 to the ton. There is much

HANKOW'S FATE
IS IN BALANCE

Imperial Troops Still Hold the Trenches.

GUNBOATS ARE PUT TO ROUT

As the Rebel Fire Threatened to Annihiliate Them, They Executed a Dangerous Maneuver and Took Refuge Behind the Foreign Flotilla—Revolutionaries Attack With Vigor the Imperial Troops on Land.

Hongkong, Oct. 19.—A salient feature of the celebration on the anniversary of the birthday of Confucius has been the total absence of the yellow dragon flag of China. The crowd shouted repeatedly "Down with the Manchus." It is reported that the rebellion is spreading to Hangchow, Hsiaokau and elsewhere.

Hankow, Oct. 19.—To reinforce General Chang Piao, who has only 1,000 men strongly entrenched north of Hankow, Admiral Sa Chen Ping at dawn landed 2,000 marines. The revolutionaries, who have been seriously menacing Chang Piao's troops, were immediately attacked with vigor and at the same time the imperial gunboats in the Han river opened fire. Two of the imperial gunboats were badly damaged and it is reported that they are in sinking condition. The gunboats made ineffectual reply to the firing from the shore, and as the rebel fire threatened to annihilate them they executed a dangerous maneuver and took refuge behind the foreign flotilla.

In the meantime the land fire was fierce, though not decisive. The revolutionaries made repeated attacks upon the trenches, but were repulsed each time with heavy loss. Scores of wounded were brought to Hankow and treated at the Red Cross hospital established in the foreign concessions.
Hitherto the concessions have been in no danger, but as a precautionary measure landing parties have been sent ashore from foreign warships.
The imperial troops still hold the trenches, though they have lost several hundred in killed and wounded.
Negotiations have taken place between Admiral Sa Chen Ping and General Quan Heng. Chinese reports have it that the latter was coerced to accept the leadership of the rebels, and he cannot be regarded as the most prominent man connected with the movement.

Nanking Taken by Rebels.
San Francisco, Oct. 19.—Cablegrams received at Chinese headquarters in this city state that the revolutionists, following a week's siege of the city of Nanking, took the first line of fortifications by assault and are now inside the walls of the city fighting the imperial garrison in a house-to-house combat. They are aided by the Chinese inhabitants of the city, who, following the entrance of the revolutionists, joined in attacking the imperial troops.

COMPLAIN ABOUT LARGEST CROWD REPAIR OF ROAD IS DAY'S RECORD

to stand there for vehicles to drive over. Most farmers declare that the material deposited on a road should be spread out if the best results would be obtained. If this plan is followed, it is declared, the material will be packed evenly and a smooth road will result if it is given some care during the year.

Farmers are at a loss, many of them, to understand why so much money in road repair should be spent so injudiciously. Many declare that the roads of Rush county would be the best in the State if the amount of repair done on them were made in a sensible and sane manner. There are some road supervisors, it is said, who use good judgment in repairing their sections of road and as a result have a good road.

Farmers generally advise the use of the road drag. It is said that there is no other implement used in road repair and upkeep that brings about the desired result any better than the road drag. The road drag is not costly, but it is excellent for smoothing off the surface of a road and in keeping it in good condition.

EXPECT 750 PEOPLE FROM GREENSBURG

Horse Show Officials Get Word That Immense Crowd Will be up on Special Tonight.

TO HOLD PROGRAM FOR GUESTS

Mother and Teachers Will Hold

Round Table Discussion.

Word from Greensburg today was that a crowd estimated at seven hundred and fifty would be here tonight on a Big Four special train for the horse show. The free attraction and the big automobile parade will be held until the special arrives in this city. It will leave Greensburg promptly at seven o'clock and is expected to be here by eight o'clock. The Rushville band will meet the special at the station and escort the crowd to the city.

Greensburg Eagles arranged the excursion for this city in return for the crowd which Rushville sent there for the fall festival and carnival. Rushville sent a delegation of five hundred and Greensburg wishes to come back one better. The train will stop at Milroy, Sandusky and Williamsport and many will board it there no doubt.

THIS FALL IS AN EXCEPTIONAL ONE

Last Night Time For First Killing
 Frost of Season But None Appears.

IT IS PREDICTED TONIGHT

This fall will go down in history as an exceptional one due to the fact that no heavy frost has put in its appearance. According to weather forecasters all over the country last night was the average date for the first killing frost but none appeared. No frost has been reported this fall. The earliest killing frost on the records was reported September 21, 1897. Only on two occasions, however, have frosts been reported during September. First frosts usually come during October, but there has been a few years when they were delayed until November. The local forecast for today promises fair weather with a drop in temperature and frost tonight.

down the street several times and he examined everyone of the mares carefully. Before he placed the ribbon and after he had looked each one over again he announced to the crowd that it was the finest bunch of general purpose mares that he ever saw together. The judge was roundly applauded for that.

The Warick Company of comic acrobats attracted a large crowd this afternoon. The company will give another performance this evening at eight o'clock.

The crowd on the streets last night was the largest that has appeared on the streets of Rushville in the evening for many years. People crowded into the streets and on the sidewalks so that it was impossible to carry out the horse show program with any degree of satisfaction.

There was a large list of entries in the pony show last night. The judge, Bert Sonders of Kennard, was handicapped to a great extent by people crowding around the ponies. Ribbons were tied on under great difficulties. A parade of the ponies was made before the show was started.

The free-for-all trot in First street late yesterday afternoon after the mule show was finished was won in straight heats by Fred Dagler. His horse was the least bit faster than John McGee's who managed to race his trotter neck and neck with Dagler in the second heat. Jim Geraghty finished second in the first heat and he and McGee divided the second and third moneys between them.

The Misses Edith Caldwell and Pearl Applegate will entertain the mothers of the pupils in their rooms at the Graham school building tomorrow afternoon. It is calculated that the innovation will be very helpful both to the pupils and teachers.

INDIANA ORANGE GROWERS

Such Was Inscription Put on Crate of Apples Sent to T. J. Geraghty.

"Indiana Orange Growers" was inscribed on the tag which was tacked on the box of apples sent to Tom J. Geraghty by John Denmer and Ben Sparks. The box was addressed to the New York Herald reporter's rooms and was sent by express so it is apparent that the staff of the Herald is due for another feast such as the members had when the crate of pawpaws arrived there. It is calculated that the apples will cause the reporters to cease work as the pawpaws did since a choice lot were selected. They were "shined" up and all "bound round" with tissue paper to give the impression that such apples are very precious in Indiana.

The smartest fabrics the mills of the entire world could produce. The finest tailoring money can procure.

The result is apparent in our magnificent fall showing of suits, coats and skirts. To show you is our pleasure.

See our windows, decorated for the Horse Show, especially in the evening when Ladies' Evening Ready-to-Wear Dresses will be featured.

This Store Will Be Open

Thursday night of the Horse Show. View the Auto Parade from our second story windows. All our country and city friends are invited to avail themselves of this opportunity.
